If "Big Steel" Cut Loose
Two Brothers Compete
Only 400 Billion?
The Kaiser's Kindness

—BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

CHARLES M. SCHWAB, who ought to know, says the "steel slump" is over and urges: "Curb ill-advised competition." He and Mr. Farrell will perhaps arrange that. The public, which didn't know there was a slump, should remember the late Judge Gary's statement, "The United States Steel Co. can sell steel at a profit for less than it costs other companies to make it." That would make real competition painful.

TWO sons of a great father, half-brothers, will today enter a contest to decide their superiority. Both inherit the father's power.

The sons, named Mars and Crusader, are race horses, out of excellent material, bred by the great horse man of War. There race in 100 pounds.

Some believe that human beings could be bred to greater perfection, as horses, cows, pigs, sheep and bulldogs are, by careful selection of mothers and fathers. But it can't be done. "The Lord does not allow it. And that helps to keep 'all men equal' or nearly so."

A FINANCIER, referring to "our national wealth of $400,000,000,000," might as well refer to John D. Rockefeller's wealth of "a bagful of golf clubs."

Mr. Rockefeller has other things. So has the United States.

The oil, gold, iron, coal, copper, silver, lead, zinc, to the United States are worth alone far more than 400 billions. Some brain now at work in the United States will produce AN 1165A worth more to the nation than $400,000,000,000.

MERELY as working machines able to produce wealth, our 100,000,000 Americans are easily worth $400,000,000,000. That is valuing them at $4,000 apiece, which isn't much. They need produce only $240 a year each to earn 6 per cent on $400,000,000,000.

THE former kaiser says that out of regard for his first cousin, King George, who the kaiser's uncle, he, the kaiser, forbade his Zeppelins to drop high explosives on King James' Palace and how King George into the presence of their joint grandmother, Queen Victoria.

HOWEVER, King George owes the kaiser nothing, for the relationship between the two made all the talk about "hanging the kaiser" meaningless. Britain wouldn't put a hanging in the records of its royal family, and that saved William Hohenzollern from that uncomfortable "quarter of an hour" to which the French king referred when his former favorite was being tortured and executed.

WHAT would Harvard give for 6,000 books now in the possession of the bolshevik government. They belonged to Voltaire, where fine handwriting and artistic comment appear on thousands of their pages. Catherine the Second, of Russia, intelligent woman, bought the books and all other contents of Voltaire's house at Ferney, including the wooden wainscoting.

SOME followers of Mohammed now travel to Mecca—Turks, Egyptians and others—in automobiles. Arabia alone now has 300 motor cars, and Arabian horses are getting used to them.

One pilgrim who gazed upon the sacred black stone from which Mohammed rode up to heaven on his white horse might have gone there in his motor car, but could not have driven back.

After he had seen the holy place he deliberately put out both his eyes, "that he might never again look upon anything less holy."

MRS. PEARL T. KELLY of Chicago, requesting a divorce, gives to the judge as "grounds" the following: "In nine years of marriage I have only presented my husband over a washing machine, an electric iron and a kitchen cabinet. Irving Berlin could almost write a song about that."

PARADE WILL BE FEATURE OF ARMISTICE DAY

Main Celebration Scheduled To Start at 7 O'Clock at Night

WHISTLES TO BLOW

Detachment of Soldiers Will Fire Salute of 11 Guns in Morning

An Armistice Day celebration which in many respects will be similar to the historic demonstration on Nov. 11, 1918, the day that the World War came to a close, will be held in Marion next month on the anniversary of the event.

This was decided at a meeting of the Armistice Day committee at a meeting last night when final plans for the celebration were completed.

A street parade and patriotic demonstration starting the night of Nov. 11 at 7 o'clock is to be the outstanding feature of the day's program and will be staged in a manner similar to the original Armistice Day celebration in 1918, according to plans of the committee.

There will be no formal limitations or restrictions on the parade line-up, the general public being invited to participate. This arrangement also applies to the throngs which will assemble to witness the parade, the plan being to stage a demonstration which will be one of the most notable expressions of patriotism in the history of the city.

There are to be military and fraternal organizations, school children, Boy Scouts, bands and drum corps and numerous floats in the line of march.

Business and industrial concerns will be invited to enter floats or to be represented by groups of employees.

The Red Cross will be featured prominently to call attention to the annual Roll Call campaign of the organization, which will be in progress during the week.

Confetti, balloons and red fire will be plentifully supplied by the Armistice Day committee and noise-making devices of every description will be permitted to complete a scene that will be as nearly as possible duplicate the spectacular demonstration in 1918.

Starts in Morning
The day's program will start in the morning with bells and whistles throughout the city heralding the event during a five-minute period preceding 11 o'clock, the hour of the Armistice.

This introduction will cease promptly at 11 o'clock, when a detachment of soldiers stationed at the Central Junior High School grounds will fire a salute of 11 guns.

Immediately following the salute, there is to be a two-minute period of silence in which the entire city is expected to observe.

Ruth to Realize Dream--To Buy Frocks in Paris

American Girl Flier Will Spend Whole Week in Fashion Center

PARIS, Oct. 29.—Realization of a dream she said she had had all her life was to occupy Ruth Elder's first waking hours here today.

She was to buy herself a few Paris frocks.

After all Paris had responded gallantly to her charming personality and the daring American girl flier had been fetted by American and French society and by France's Aero Club, Ruth remembered that there was something very important she wanted to do. At her hotel late last night she said:

"The first thing I am going to do tomorrow is to buy myself a couple of dresses."

"All my life I have been dreaming of Paris and the beautiful things that gladden the heart of women that are made here."

"I am staying a week instead of leaving on the Mauretania tomorrow as I had expected. I am going to buy the pretty things I have wanted all my life."

When Ruth and George Halde- man swooped down upon Paris yesterday after a record trip from Baginone, the welcoming committee was under the impression that their enjoyment of Ruth's presence would be cut short by her sudden departure.

As a result, the American Girl was rushed through a program of banquets and receptions which were originally intended to take a week's time.

If Ruth thought the French people were wonderful, the French people certainly returned the compliment. From the moment the first crowd greeted her as she stepped from her plane at Le Bourget until she finally retired at her hotel, Parisians cheered and showed clearly that they thought Ruth was "charmant et jolie."

Immediately Ruth and Halde- man got clear of the thousands massed to welcome them at the flying field, they were rushed to the Hotel Lott. Then, acting under the supposition that the Americans were leaving in the morning, the welcoming committee began to rush Miss Elder and her companion through the rest of the prepared program.

G. B. GASCOIGNE SAYS $800,000 FAIR ESTIMATE

Cleveland Engineer Places Probable Cost of Proposed Sewers at $760,000

BASED ON SURVEY

Says East Side Construction Plan Would Not Relieve West Marion

That City Engineer Tom S. Cathers' estimate of $800,000 as the probable cost of building two new trunk line storm water sewers, extension of the sanitary sewer system and correction of cross connections, is a fairly accurate figure is shown in a communication received today from George H. Gascoigne, Cleveland, who has made a study of the sewerage needs of the city.

The communication, addressed to Service Director O. A. Benedict gives Mr. Gascoigne's estimate of the cost as $760,000, or $40,000 less than that set by the city engineer.

Mr. Gascoigne was employed by the city to draft plans for the city's new disposal plant, which, since its construction, has been used as a model by a large number of municipalities having problems similar to Marion. He bases his estimate on a preliminary survey which he made here in September 1926 and on the findings of a board of engineers in 1921.

"Plan Not Feasible"
In response to numerous arguments for the construction of only the east side sewer as a means of relieving the Columbus and Silver street mains and thus correcting flood conditions in West Marion, Mr. Gascoigne says such a plan is not feasible.

The communication from the Cleveland engineer was the result of an effort made by Service Director Benedict to obtain approximate cost of the improvement and the feasibility of the plan submitted by the city engineer.

Communication
The communication follows:
"In accordance with your instructions I have carefully considered the data upon which the proposed $800,000 bond issue for Marion's sewerage project is based. The proposed program is in accordance with the preliminary report of September 1926, and the findings of the board of engineers of Dec. 31, 1921. It also includes all the information that naturally becomes available in carrying out approximately $1,000,000 worth of work in Marion. Furthermore, I have carefully studied Mr. Cathers' article upon the bond issue which appeared in the Oct. 25 issue of 'The Marion Star'."

"The program of construction as outlined by Mr. Cathers agrees basically and otherwise with the improvements that have been planned. The locations shown and the sizes given must of necessity be subject to slight alterations by detailed field surveys, yet the estimates of cost are such as to cover such alterations as are ordinarily found necessary during the design and construction of important sewerage improvements."

"I have estimated the cost of the proposed improvements, taking into account the information which is available upon this particular phase of the subject. Furthermore, the quantities Turn To Page 5.

Mother of Bucyrus Coach Stricken on Eve of Team's Battle With Harding Squad

Crawford County Eleven Ready To Play Game Without Services of Director Julian Winters; Third League Match for Red and Black

Word was received here today by school officials of the death Friday of Coach Julian Winters' mother at her home in Napoleon, where she had been ill of heart trouble for some time.

Julian, and a brother, "Sonny," prominent Ohio Wesleyan athlete star, survive.

The Marion-Bucyrus football game will be played, despite the fact that Winters will not be in attendance. The game is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, to be played at Marion. The team will be under the supervision of Henry Winters, who has been assisting Winters as coach during the latter's absence from the practice field here.

The Bucyrus clash this afternoon will be the third league game of the season for the Red and Black. The team hopes to keep its N. C. O. league slate clean. A win over the Bucyrus team will put Harding one step nearer the coveted league flag which Harding at present seems to have a good chance of winning.

If the locals win this afternoon the league scramble will likely be settled at the fairgrounds next Saturday afternoon when Mansfield, also unbeaten comes here.

Marion football fans were torn between two fires this afternoon. With Harding in action at the fairgrounds and Ohio State tackling Chicago at the Buckeye Stadium at Columbus, the fans were forced to choose between the two attractions. Mid-forenoon saw a number leave for Columbus, but from all indications the Harding game will be witnessed by one of the largest crowds to fill the fairground bleachers this year.

There will be only one shift in the Harding lineup from the one that started against Ashland. Ansley will start at left tackle for Red. The starters will be: Wright, left end; Ansley, left tackle; Zlummer, right guard; Evans, center; Captain Kramer, right guard; Smith, right tackle; Houghton, right end; Stafford, fullback; Lowe, quarterback; Therrill, right half, and McAnab, left half.

Will Not Attempt Flight Unless Quite Sure of Success

Old Orchard, Me., Oct. 29.—Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson's transatlantic Amphibian plane, "The Dawn," will be heading for Copenhagen, Denmark, within the next few days or the projected flight will be abandoned.

This statement was made by Mrs. Grayson early today to International News Service as she returned from Boston where she had been in conference with Clarence Chamberlin, New York to Germany flier.

"Because of the lateness of the season I will not again this year attempt a flight to Copenhagen unless I feel quite sure of success," Mrs. Grayson said.

She had discussed weather conditions with Chamberlin and the outcome was the decision to go within a few days or cancel the flight. Through Chamberlin told her that early winter was a good time for transatlantic flying, Mrs. Grayson declared that she could not wait until that time because of several reasons, chiefly financial.

ARREST LATTER JUST BEFORE JURY REPORTS

Willbur Hand Convicted of Robbing Gallion Bank Last June 28

BROTHER UNDER BOND

Jurors Out Six Hours and 25 Minutes Before Returning Verdict

(Special to The Star)
Bucyrus, Oct. 29.—While Willbur Hand, Toledo, found guilty by a jury of participating in the $175,000 holdup of the Gallion Commercial Savings Bank, June 28, last, passed his allotted space in the Crawford County Jail today, a nearly full day occupied by his brother, Arthur, Toledo, as the third and latest of the alleged bandit group of six members to be arrested.

Willbur Hand was awaiting sentence, which will not be pronounced, it was said, until after the three days allotted for appeal have elapsed.

Arthur was held in jail in the absence of $50,000 bond asked when he pleaded not guilty in preliminary arraignment before Mayor H. H. Hartmann last night.

Climax to Trial
The arrest of Arthur Hand gave a finishing touch to the drama of his brother's trial, which has held the attention of all north central Ohio for the past week. As he sat in the courtroom as an accused and spectator during the trial, various state witnesses pointed him out as a member of the robber band.

His arrest last night at 8:30 o'clock in the office of Attorney O. W. Kennedy here, presided the announcement of the jury's verdict last 30 minutes. While the jury members took their places, preparatory to submitting their findings, he was arraigned before Mayor Hartmann.

The final argument in Willbur Hand's behalf was made before the jury yesterday afternoon by Chief Defense Counsel George H. Toole. He pointed to the anonymous letter received by Ed H. Healy, which named his client and Harry Zillich, Toledo, also under arrest, as the keynotes of the prosecution. Healy's influence on a prominent citizen had served to influence other state witnesses, he contended.

Former Crawford County Prosecutor Chester Meek, now of Toledo, made the final address to the jury, asserting in his brief that the state's case against Hand was unable to describe accurately the various members of the band, and was induced to return and risk identification.

The jury was locked up at 2:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon and reported after six hours and 25 minutes deliberation at 9 o'clock.

SCANTILY CLAD GIRL LEAPS TO HER DEATH

Another Tragedy of Broadway Recorded; Leaves Note to Mother

New York, Oct. 29.—Another tragedy of Broadway, the street of bright lights and broken hearts, was enacted today when a beautiful dark-haired girl of 22, who wrote a pathetic note to "Darling Mother" and then jumped from the eighth floor of the Knickerbocker Hotel, was instantly killed.

Her body, clad only in a silk slip and a brassiere, was found on the roof of a one-story extension to the rear of the hotel. She had registered last night as "M. H. Green, Boston, N. J." But her name, "The police believe she is Mildred Nash of Milford, Mass."

"Darling Mother! Please forgive me! I found a note from my dresser. 'You know I do not love Budzie, and the New York life is driving me mad.' The girl had dark lashed hair and dark eyes. She registered at the hotel about 8 o'clock last night. She went to her room, No. 810, at once, and nothing more was heard from her by the management until this morning when she called the hotel telephone operator and said:

"I'm going to commit suicide. Good-bye."

A house detective and a clerk immediately rushed to the room but while they were on the way other guests heard the crash of the girl's body on to roof below.

$1,400 Program Being Offered
This Year by Harding High School

More than 600 season tickets have been sold for the lecture course program, to be presented here by seniors of Harding High School this year, the number exceeding, it is believed, the number of tickets sold at the same time last year.

A $1,400 course is offered this year with six numbers, one more than last year's program, for the same price of $2 per season ticket. Should the ticket sale warrant it an additional number will be presented the ticket holder free of charge.

Reservations for the first performance, Wednesday night, may be made at the school Monday, by calling at the school or through high school students. Seats are reserved free of charge to ticket holders.

The course is presented not as a means of raising money for the school but that the school, as an educational institution, may be instrumental in bringing forth while talent to the city.

The first number, a comedy play, "The Family Upstairs," written by Harry Dell, will be given at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at The Star Auditorium. Single admission tickets for the performance may be obtained.

The play features Noah Beilharz in the famous character role of "Pa Heller" and is noted for its realistic and clever portrayal of American home life.

I read in the papers, and the people that I run into as I prowl around the old commonwealth, (not so common this wealth as it is advertised.) Well, today I had quite a treat that I know a lot of you envy me. I had lunch with Arthur Brisbane. Guess most of you have heard of Brisbane, unless you don't read Editorials.

I have been asked more times, "Will, did you ever meet Brisbane and what kind of a fellow is he?" Well I have been knowing him for quite a while. I don't know of a man to talk to that you can sit and get more information out of. He is up on about everything there is. He knows everybody in the world and talks with everybody, and he don't do all the talking when he is with them. He is a good listener. For

Gave All Even Break

He is the one that Mr. Ford gave the news too first when he first offered his apology to the Jewish people and Brisbane did a big thing. Instead of releasing it just to the Hearst papers as a big beat, he gave them all an even break, even papers that were opposition to his own. He has just a week or so ago had lunch with the Coolidge's and he declares that Cal is not going to run. He says that even Mrs. Coolidge didn't know anything about him deciding not to run until he had handed it in to the reporters. He says that Mr. Coolidge would like to get into some firm and give him a chance to make some money for himself. That of course a President hasn't a chance to earn much out of his salary as the requirements are so great. He says that since Mr. Coolidge has become accustomed to this luxury, like Yacht's and all that, he sorter likes 'em, and that he would like to get out and make himself some yacht while the getting is good.

For Andrew Mellon

Brisbane thinks Mellon should be given the nomination because he has done more to further the Coolidge Administration. Here is Mellon that has worked these years for ten thousand a year. He has sacrificed enough that we ought to do something for him, that he is a great man on business and finance, and that's all America is, is a business institution. He said he told Mellon that he should run, and Mr. Mellon said, "I couldn't do all the work now, why we really wanted to have 'The Government.'" And Mr. Brisbane has more oil than California, and he told him, "Why you been doing it all as it is, as President you wouldn't have anything to do." He thinks there is a good deal of down to earth impression while we are leaning to Hughes if Smith is nominated, on account of figuring that hardy know what it was and it wouldn't make any impression on them. But Hughes would carry N. Y. State. He also bore out my oft repeated statement, and that is that the sentiment of the Country is DRY. That's the way they have learned to know their better voting sentiment. He told me in ad-duck, and so we really have the cruisers to sort of bluff the South and Central American Republics. We had to go in and get that oil to beat England to it.

They wouldn't know what an airplane is.

Would Conquer Wind

He says Henry Ford wants to build a plane that will cost perhaps a million dollars, sort of like an ocean liner, with a bunch of Engines, and machine shop where you repaired any that went bum on you. Going on the theory that we have covered the ocean with big strong ships that withstand the waves and storm and that the wind is not as strong as the waves, so that it should be easier still to build something that would withstand the air. He said General Motors would do something along Aeroplane experiments; but the costs would have to come out of the Stockholders and that it wouldn't be right to them, so they haven't done anything along that line. I think Mr. Brisbane has made a lot of money in stocks, and there is a lot that he could have made that he didn't. Otto Kahn wanted him to buy General Motors when it was thirty. He was going to buy two thousand shares. He would have made ten and a half million if he had done so. Otto wanted him to buy Winchester Arms one time, but because it was fifteen hundred a share, he thought, "What fool would buy $1500 per share when it is selling for $1500. (Which it was at the time.)" He wouldn't buy it and in a few weeks it was thirty-five hundred.

When he told me what Mr. Hearst made on some of his papers, it made me want to write this as an Editorial, print it myself, get me some cartoons, and go into the newspaper business. He says that Hearst is a newspaper genius. It may look like sometimes that Hearst is throwing money away, and the first thing it all pops up in tips in some new paper. He told me of the time when he left the World in New York to go over to Hearst. He said he used to take a few nips now and again and that he cowed that he would never take another swig till the circulation of the Hearst paper passed the World. He said he thought it would mean a drop of about seven years. He started there eight weeks and passed the World. Now what are you going to do with a man that is that anxious for a drink?

However, I believe that he was so satisfied with himself during the drought that he kept it up. He was the first newspaper man to discover that New York City was going up town, and instead of writing Editorials about it, he went up there and bought. Today you can't get above Fifty-third Street, or Hearst and you don't pass 'em till you get above Fifty-ninth. He's got him a new home out here on the desert, about 100 miles from Los Angeles. He has drilled him some wells and has put a year. He's got about six children.

That would make a lot of us like him even if we didn't agree with all he says all the time. He is the most widely read writer in America today, and when you say that, it means the World. For while they got a lot of people in Europe that can read they haven't got many that do. Lord knows what salary he gets. He is the first newspaper man that ever got fifty thousand a year, and that's been so long ago that I bet he forgot he ever worked for that little. Hearst says gave him a percentage over a certain circulation, and it was on a sliding scale, the higher the circulation the more percentage, and before six months was up, Hearst was out shooting subscribers to keep 'em from taking the paper. If he hadn't called a ball, Hearst would have been working for Brisbane.

MICHAEL STROGOFF TO BE SHOWN HERE

Film Version of Old Stage Favorite Coming to Grand Theater Monday

A recently published book commenting on the life of Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women" and other equally charming books, devotes a couple of interesting chapters to Miss Alcott's obsession to produce a new dramatization of Jules Verne's Michael Strogoff. This great novel was dramatized many years ago and for 10 years was one of the most spectacular plays on the American stage. However Miss Alcott felt that there was drama in this book of a sort that had been entirely missed in the original dramatization. And so she spent all of her vacation time and other odd moments for more than eight years in working on this dramatization. It was one of the works still unfinished at her death. Perhaps it will someday be completed by another and brought to the stage again, with all the strength and color of the original blended with the charm and whimsicality of "Little Women."

AID SOCIETY

Mrs. S. D. Krane Hostess to Members of Salem Group

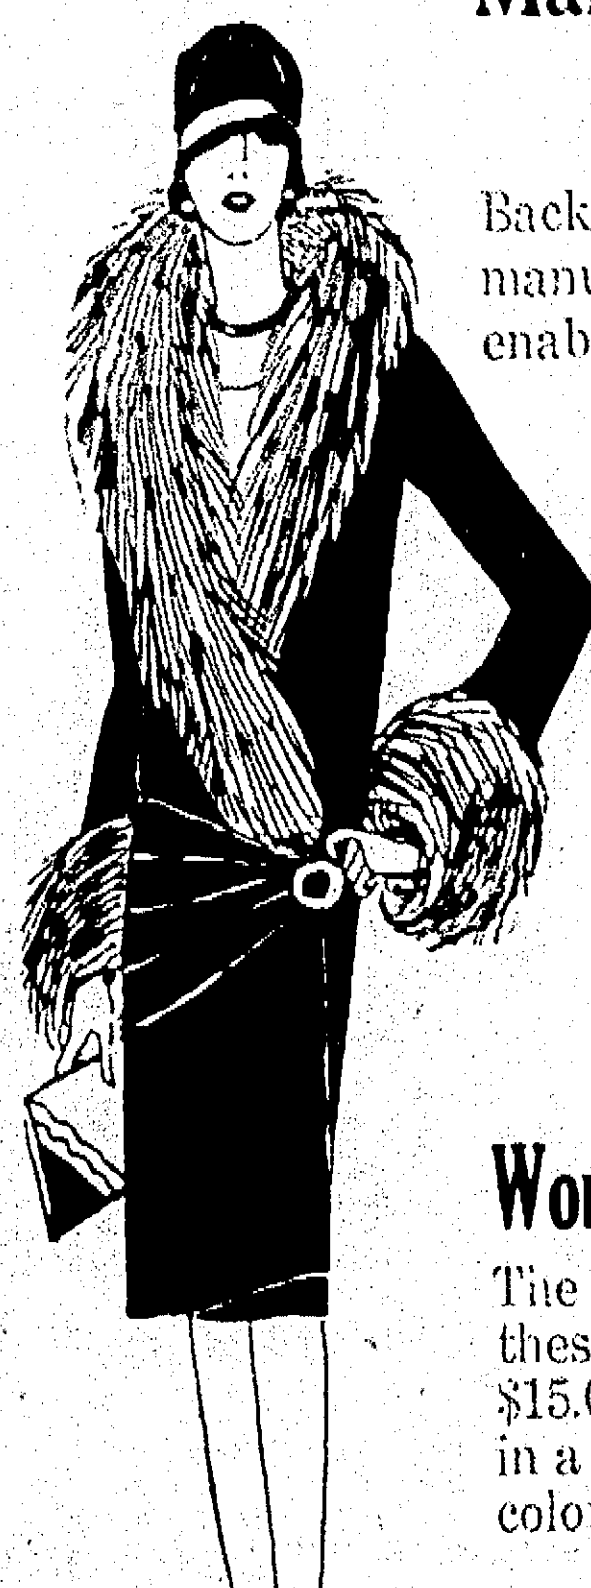

Beech, Oct. 28—Mrs. S. D. Krane was hostess to the Salem Ladies' Aid Society at an all-day meeting Thursday. The day was spent in piecing quilt blocks. At noon a delicious dinner was served. A business session in charge of the president, Mrs. H. H. Klinefelter, was held in the afternoon which opened with song followed by scripture reading and prayer. It was decided that the next aid meeting would be held at the church in two weeks on Nov. 10 in the afternoon, when election of officers will take place. Two new members were received into the society, Mrs. Harley Shuey and Mrs. Henry Baldauf. Members present included Mrs. J. F. Tittelbaugh, Mrs. W. H. Plant, Mrs. H. H. Klinefelter, Mrs. Jay McClenathan, Mrs. William Kreutter, Mrs. G. W. Sergeant, Mrs. Herbert Messenger, Mrs. G. H. Glauner, Mrs. Harley Ault, Mrs. Addie Klinefelter, Mrs. Martha Tittelbaugh, Mrs. Marion Smith, Mrs. Harley Shuey, Mrs. Henry Baldauf and Mrs. S. D. Krane. ## MORTGAGE BUSINESS IS BACK TO NORMAL

Decrease in Real Estate Transactions Shown During Week at Recorder's Office

Mortgage transactions in Marion County moved up to the normal volume this week after two weeks during which the total fell below the usual average. At the same time there was a decrease in real estate transactions, only 21 transfers of property taking place during the week, the county recorder's register shows. This was five less than the number of transfers during the preceding week.

There were 34 mortgages totalling $81,002.57 filed this week. Thirty were on properties in the city of Marion and totalling $72,402.57, the remainder being on farm properties. A loan of $15,000 on a city property was the largest of the week. Two loans on farms one of $3,000 on 73 acres of land in Grand Township, and another of $1,000 on 60 acres in Richland Township, were made by the Union Central Life Insurance Co.

Evidence that money is plentiful in local financial institutions is seen in the week's mortgage record, which shows that loans amounting to $72,550 were made by Marion's building and loan associations.

pected to participate by suspension of all activities. Stores, factories and other places of business will join in this silent tribute in honor of the World War heroes.

Services at the school grounds will close with a prayer and brief talk by Rev. Earl L. Holliday, pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church and a veteran of the war.

No Afternoon Program

There will be no afternoon program. The committee had planned to stage the parade during the afternoon but this program was changed at last night's meeting. The original plan, outlined last week, was to stage a parade in accordance with a formal program but the committee decided that a night demonstration following lines of the 1918 Armistice Day event would be more appropriate and successful.

Today Oscar Gast, chairman of the general committee in preparing to send invitations to all local military and fraternal organizations to participate in the parade. There are approximately 30 of these organizations in the city and it is expected that most of them will be represented.

To Wear Uniforms

A special effort will be made to have all World War veterans appear in uniform. Chairman Gast stated today that the largest assemblage of ex-service men brought together here since the close of the war is expected to be in the parade.

All hands and drum corps in the city and county will be invited to join in the celebration.

Following the parade, which is to be in charge of George T. Geron as grand marshal, there will be an Armistice Day dance and entertainment program in the Eagles Building on W. Center. Admission will be free and the general public is invited. The committee chairman stated today. A refreshment stand is to be operated at the Eagles' hall by the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion.

To Be County Event

The line of march for the parade and final details of the dance and entertainment program will be announced within a few days.

The committee meeting was held last night at the headquarters of Marion County Chapter of the Red Cross in the Ellis apartment building on S. Main. Miss Alma Dougherty, executive secretary of the Red Cross, is serving as secretary of the Armistice Day committee.

The celebration, the committee has decided, is to be a county event and it is expected that organizations from all sections of the county will be represented.

Schools of the city and county have also been invited to take part. A special request made in a resolution adopted by Bird-McGinnis Post, No. 162 of the American Legion, that schools be closed in Armistice Day will probably be granted, it was indicated today. Armistice Day was designated as a legal holiday in the last session of the state legislature.

state chairman, and then returned to the fold and was influential in the Harding campaign of 1920. He is accounted by his friends and opponents alike as "an able politician." Brown has not definitely accepted the appointment as yet, but it has been offered him and he is considering it. The political railbirds of the capital see in the other young deep down political strategy, for as an assistant to Hoover the Obolons would be in a position to give constant counsel and advice. He knows politics in many states outside Ohio.

The acquittal of Hoover of the charge of limiting the farmers' profits during the war years was accomplished by an inquiry addressed to Dr. Harry A. Garfield, chairman of the fair price committee in 1917, by the Kansas City Star. The query addressed to Dr. Garfield was in effect: "just what did Herbert Hoover have to do with fixing the price of wheat in 1917-18-19?"

The answer, in effect, was: "Nothing."

Took No Part

"Mr. Hoover, at his express wish," said Dr. Garfield, "took no part in the deliberations of the committee on whose recommendation I determined the government's fair price, nor has he in any way intimated an opinion regarding that price."

During the next few months, the Hoover managers plan to see to it that this Garfield statement is given broadcast throughout the grain belt. They will see to it particularly that farmers' organizations throughout the west are saturated with this bit of information. And they are counting upon it to overcome some of the admitted opposition that exists against the secretary of commerce in that region.

The Hoover candidacy has not, thus far, had any shoddy between the Ohio line and the Rockies, according to political reports sitting back to Washington. Hoover was blamed for the wartime price fixing of wheat, and for his opposition to the McNary-Haugen Bill which passed last session and which President Coolidge vetoed. The Garfield absolutism is expected to partially, at least, overcome this agricultural antipathy.

FIVE REASONS

For Buying Triangle
Insured Tires

First—They are positively insured in writing for one year, against stone bruises, rim cuts, blow-outs, tread separation, or any other defects or ACCIDENTS that would put the tire out of use.

Second—Such a guarantee is possible, because Triangle Insured Tires are built above the standard in quality and strength and are super over-size.

Third—They do not cause the trouble and roadside delays ordinary tires give.

Fourth—The EXTRA service they give, because of their super quality, makes them the lowest price per mile tire you can buy.

Fifth—This is a direct factory proposition and consequently we are able to sell these tires at prices no higher than you would pay for ordinary tires.

Put an insured Triangle alongside any other tire made. We will INSURE IT A YEAR. You cannot lose. And you will realize for yourself how much better and longer they will run.

Shop around. Compare the Tires and the Prices. Then come to us and be the judge yourself.

There probably will be an unusual rush of women folks to Europe just as soon as it gets noised about that the British and French are waging an air line war, with both offering bargain-counter prices for plane service between London and Paris.

It's no more than right that the United States supreme court should decide to review the appeal of Dr. Cook for his release on probation. It's a burning outrage longer to hold in confinement a daring spirit accustomed to hobnob with nature at the North pole and on the misty mountain top.

A Buckeye newspaperman, who is writing a series of articles on undergraduate life in this state, says that the graduate, and not the student, is the real gridiron booster. How did he ever escape becoming a typical sleuth?

It may be just as well should the now portrait for which the president is to sit be inscribed with his name. Mr. Coolidge is not an imaginary man, and if it is anything like the most of the painted portraits of men notable in our political life such a mark of identification will save him an awful lot of utterly useless guessing.

Eamon de Valera has introduced a bill in the Dail Eireann to repeal the public safety act, passed after the assassination, last July, of Vice President Kevin O'Higgins of the council of ministers. Admittedly the act is draconic, but it is his party isn't planning any assassinations—which also, it may be said, are somewhat drastic—why should he worry?

Mabel Boll, known in Europe as the "Queen of Diamonds," arrived in New York this week to prepare for a transatlantic plane flight next year. Mabel has a chateau at Senlis, north of Paris, and a mansion in the Bois de Boulogne, enough diamonds to cover her and apparently unlimited means, but she feels she can not be happy till she makes the New York-to-Paris flight. We do not know the scientific name of what's ailing her.

Where Do We Get Our Salt?

Where do we get our salt? All the world uses salt, yet it is the exceptional man or woman who can answer the question. Some may hesitate a bit and reply "duhno." Others may answer from salt water and from mines. But at what points chiefly is salt reclaimed from salt water, and where are some of the great salt mines located? This latter question will swamp most people. We admit we couldn't have answered it two or three days ago, and we wouldn't be able to answer it even in part today had we not come upon a New York story stating that, while salt is produced almost everywhere in more or less limited quantities, the great salt district of western New York was producing 2,000,000 tons of salt annually.

The New York state salt deposits are said to underlie an area of fully 2,000 square miles, and it is estimated that they will last thousands of years at the present rate of working.
The greatest two mines of the district—and the greatest two in the country, for that matter—are located about thirty miles south of Rochester, the two plants having a daily capacity of 3,000 tons. Were all other sources of supply to fail, it is said these two plants could supply the needs of the United States and Canada.

The salt industry is not new to New York state. As early as 1661, a history of the state records, Conestoga Indians used to fill shallow wooden vats with sea water and secure salt by the process of evaporation. New York state also boasts the oldest established salt company in the country, it having been in continuous operation since 1875, but the manufacture of salt for commercial purposes was started in New York's salt area much earlier than that, having begun at Syracuse, then known as Salina, 130 years ago, the annual production at that time being almost 700 tons.

As it is with salt, so it is with many friends.
We recall the experience of a one-time friend, a citizen of Zanesville, who sought a certain kind of a stopper for a fancy bottle. He had dropped the stopper which came in the bottle and it was shattered. He sought a similar stopper in New York and Philadelphia and had a big eastern glass house seek one in Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Venice to no avail.
After a quest of two years, he discovered that both the bottle and the stopper had been made in his own home city.

But we Americans may well be forgiven for not knowing our country better than we do.
It is of such vast extent, its lines of industry are so many, its natural resources so great and so varied, that no one can be expected to know even a small percentage of their aggregate. This is our alibi for not knowing that the greatest two salt mines of our land are located in the western part of our neighboring state of New York.

Ohio's Senators.

When President Coolidge issued his now famous "I do not choose" statement there was much speculation as to just what he meant.
His silence in the face of a barrage of queries, various interpretations by party leaders and comment from every section of the country served merely to confuse the general public.
The first gasp of amazement over the unexpected announcement brought with it an almost universal conclusion that the president meant only to erase himself from the picture as an avowed candidate to succeed himself to the White House; that he would be willing to accept the nomination if it were thrust upon him by unanimous vote of the Republican national convention. Viewed later in the light of Mr. Coolidge's inclination to "speak his mind" only when he had something to say, and then in the most concise language, there came a growing conviction that he meant exactly what he had said, and that he did not intend to mince words in amplifying that statement.

There were many, however, who were not convinced, but none of them was so persistent in his attempt to keep the president convinced, but none of them were so persistent in their attempts to keep the president in hot water as was Senator Fess. For weeks the Ohio senator has been proclaiming, in effect, that Mr. Coolidge is a candidate for re-nomination to the extent that he will accept it drafted, and that it is the duty and privilege of all Republicans to aid and abet in the drafting process. He became so persistent that it was apparent he was thinking more about his own political future than the immediate future of Mr. Coolidge. This more or less general impression is born out by Senator Fess' refusal to accept the president at his word even after Mr. Coolidge's caustic rebuke of the senator.

What a different picture Senator Willis presents to his constituents and to the country at large! The senior Ohio senator spent an hour with the president, then declared that if the president's "I do not choose" statement needed any amplification, it has been abundantly supplied by Coolidge's rebuke of Senator Fess.
Satisfied in his own mind that President Coolidge has removed himself permanently from consideration as a candidate, Senator Willis is proceeding along more constructive and instructive lines by interesting himself in the question of party program and platform, rather than in candidates. He holds that there are plenty of outstanding Republicans who can defeat any candidate the Democrats can place in nomination. Consideration of legislative achievement in the coming session of congress is more in keeping with a senator's duties at the present time, than any attempt to gain political prestige by forcing a personal issue in spite of a presidential rebuke.

Until quite recently we never appreciated how much royalty we at one time had in midst, right here in Ohio. We have the solemn assurance of the former millionaire "King of Bootleggers" that his one-time wife was easily the "Queen of All Gold Diggers."

In the trial of Superintendent of Schools McAndrew, up in Chicago, former Congressman John J. Gorman denounced the University of Chicago as another British castle.
Think of the nerve King George must have to plant one of his strongholds right smack in Mayor Bill Hale Thompson's sphere of influence!

Senator Charles Curtis is the first selfavowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, but this must not necessarily be taken as a reminder that his state has been referred to as "Bleeding Kansas."

We rejoice that Lindbergh had the presence of mind to forego the plan of a party of sixteen
New York chorus girls to get a little publicity at his expense. Far too many notables have been and are being imposed upon by chorus girls and others in the amusement line in the hope of acquiring free publicity.

A honeymoon argument over the proper places for knives on a well-set table, begun thirty-seven years ago by a Los Angeles couple, was ended by the granting of a decree of divorce, this week, to the wife. We simply can't help feeling that both of them are naturally just a wee bit contentious.

A merchant out a Carpenter, Iowa, has received a check for $5,000 from a tourist taken by him to a church supper in response for an appeal for aid, but he refuses to make any comment until he finds out whether or not it will be honored by the bank on which it is drawn. Our first thought was that the merchant in question was born north of the Tweed, and then we remembered that he had set up the supper.

Former Crown Prince William, of Germany, referring to the alleged interview printed in a London paper in which he is quoted as saying that the Kaiser would rescind the throne and ride on horseback in Unter den Linden soon, says that, aside from the fact that he never uttered a word of it and the further fact that he was never interviewed at that or any other subject by the paper in question, the interview is accurate in every particular. And right along we have been holding to the view that our English cousins were utterly lacking in the art of imagination!

Daylight lies among the trees.

Here the warm blood quickly cools,
Here the swift limbs quickly freeze.

Pierce my veins, what do you find?
Nothing but to congeal.

Thigh and breast and cheek are lined
With a substance hard as steel.

My green face and my green hair,
These my sharp, unvoiced tears.

Take their color from the air

THE WINTER CLOTHES PROBLEM WILL SOON BE HERE.

Gland Useful in Filtering Blood.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"What have I on the left side that could be sore and ache?"

This is a question a friend of mine asked me the other day. Perhaps you have wondered, too.

On the right side of the abdomen the liver and gall bladder are located. Opposite them is the great, ductless gland, the spleen. It is the largest of the so-called "ductless glands."

What we look upon as a "gland" is a mass of cells, grouped and working together, manufacturing a fluid or secretion which is discharged upon the outside surface or into one of the openings or canals of the body. For instance, the sweat glands discharge their fluid upon the skin. The salivary glands discharge their secretion into the mouth. The gastric glands pour their products into the stomach.

There is another group of glands having no ducts or passageways. They are closed organs inside of which the secretions are dammed up until the blood absorbs them. From a lake without an outlet there is no escape for the water except into the air or soil. From a gland without a duct leading to some outside surface, there is no escape except through the blood.

You can see why these are called "ductless glands." One of the families of glands of this type is the thyroid gland, the gland on the front and sides of the neck. It is this gland which sometimes becomes greatly enlarged, forming "goitre."

The spleen, as I have said, is the largest of the ductless glands. In the average person it is three or four inches wide, five or six inches long, and an inch or an inch and a half thick. It weighs about half a pound.

The kidney can take from the blood only such chemicals, poisons, or waste as can be dissolved in fluid. It takes care of liquid waste.

But in the activities of the body there is a considerable portion of solid matter which must be disposed of in some manner. Germs, dead blood corpuscles and other useless materials must be taken from the blood. This is the function of the spleen. In a sense it is a wonderful filter to take harmful matter from the blood and to cleanse it of such impurities.

It must be admitted at once that in spite of centuries of study there is much yet to learn about the spleen. A good many scientists regard it as an important blood-forming organ. But, after all, we need not worry over its functions. We have such an organ and must take care of it.

In olden times when running was the chief of the competitive sports, they used to remove the spleen. The operation was done in the belief that the "wind" of the runners was improved.

In modern times the spleen becomes enlarged, sometimes enormously so. It may reach fifteen or twenty pounds in weight.

There is a disease, commonly called "Bant's disease," in which enlargement of the spleen is a symptom, but the marked anemia is the serious result. It is a chronic ailment, lasting eight, ten or twelve years.

Of course there are other causes for anemia. This particular type is known as "splenic anemia." It is doubtful if pain in the side is frequently caused by trouble with the spleen. More likely the muscles of that region of the body are tired or strained. However, you know now what organ is located there.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

M. H. R. Q.—What do you advise for diseased tonsils, besides an operation?

A.—What do you advise for swollen glands in the neck?

A.—If your tonsils are diseased they should be removed, since they are apt to cause infection throughout the entire system.

Q.—The fact that your tonsils are diseased may be responsible for this condition.

Q.—What is the cause of enteritis of the brain? If a physician is called in time to lower the temperature can the condition be checked? The patient was a child who had influenza, and this trouble followed in five days. The child was in the hospital and had a special day and night nurse.

A.—This condition is due to infection. This is a very treacherous disease, and you did everything possible to combat it. Copyright, 1927.

That song of triumph which records

Editorial Comment.

LINDBERGH'S ACHIEVEMENT.

When some one asked Colonel Lindbergh whether he thought his flight to Paris was more important than the air tour of this country which he had just completed, he made the characteristically common sense reply that the two achievements could not be compared, because they differed completely in nature. As he might have said, though he didn't, the one was a feat of genius, dazzling in its audacity and unapproachable in the perfection of its execution; the other was a demonstration that his conquest of the ocean was no chance accomplishment, but the result of his mastery of mechanical appliances which make aviation an increasingly safe and useful means of transportation.

In dramatic appeal to the imagination and the emotions the transatlantic journey was incomparably the more powerful. But the other will have a wider and more lasting influence because it has encouraged a public attitude of air-mindedness. For every enthusiast who dreams of emulating that flight to Europe there are thousands upon thousands who have been convinced by the American tour that the aeroplane is dependable and flying a normal enterprise.

What Lindbergh did was to complete an itinerary of 22,500 miles, which took him into every state in the union, with landings and departures conforming to schedule with clocklike regularity. His 150 speeches reached vast audiences, and great multitudes were thrilled by his appearance in scores of parades. But more far-reaching in its effect upon the public consciousness is the fact that millions of Americans witnessed his easy, pre-arranged flights from state to state, and learned therefrom to think of aviation in terms of everyday life.

While high positions in the government, it is suggested, may be opened to Colonel Lindbergh, he has not yet decided upon his future career, except that his aim will be the advancement of aviation. Whatever its form and success may be, his accomplishments in this direction are already of immeasurable value.—Philadelphia Record.

ROBES OF SPLENDOR.

During these golden days of late October it is easy to indulge in thoughts of serenity, to experience emotions of gratitude for Nature's matchless dower of beauty and plentiful provision for the well-being of her children.

But yesterday it was springtime. Tomorrow winter will be waiting through the corridors of the world. So the seasons come and go. Mutation is the essence of life.

And as the seasons change, so do men change. But can it be said that men and women retain full beauty and majesty of character, and soul, as the years roll toward that abyss which has engulfed all the centuries of time—retain these beauties as Nature retains and preserves her own? What a world this would be if that could be said to be true!

But as all seasons possess beauty, so every condition in life possesses something of worth, something of charity, of love and tenderness, though often but vaguely and dimly expressed.

Through these magic days we are sensing a change of the year. Gentle warnings come to us from the leaf-barks, about on the current of the still beneficent winds, or from the harbors where they come finally to rest.

'Tis near November, but still incomparable coloring and pungent, fragrant odors invite the grateful senses to exquisite appreciation. The fields are flaming with banners of gold and purple. The days grow drowsy. The roads, the lanes, the pasture fields and woodlands are provocative to adventuring—quests for rarer treasure than the Golden Fleece.

The world is wearing its robes of splendor. It is good to be alive.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THROTTLING JUSTICE.

Chicago is enjoying the spectacle of Justice prostrate upon her back in the Cook county criminal court. The judicial branch of Cook county's government is helpless in the power of a criminal conspiracy that reaches into the very presence of the judge.

An effort is being made to secure a jury to try a gangster for murder. He is accused of trying to blackmail a poor Jew junk dealer into joining an organization. When the Jew refused to pay the blackmail and tribute, which was what is amounted to, this gangster shot him dead. He was taken to the jail, but his powerful friends have spread terror throughout the city. They have dynamited the home of the principal prosecuting witness and have threatened the lives of his family. Witnesses have been moved into a hotel and are guarded by officers. Two hundred and nine out of 210 called into the jury box have evaded service by one excuse or another. It is apparent that most of them are fearful of the consequences of their accepting jury service. So far only one juror has been taken by both sides.

This is a terrible state of affairs to exist in any American state or city, yet it is not infrequent and it affords the people a problem that must be faced and solved. Our courts and the administration of law must not be paralyzed, as they have been in this case, and as they may be in any case where the interests at stake justify the means that have been resorted to in this one.—Illinois State Journal.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

If a man fails to vote in the South American republic of Uruguay he may be fined or even thrown into jail. This makes a citizen take his citizenship seriously. It's a sad sign on human intelligence that men have to be forced to vote. If men and women have the slightest idea of what life and living are all about, they will never let anything but death keep them from voting. For in the ballot lies their hope of governing themselves wisely. They can't govern themselves wisely unless they try. And voting means trying.

Ever hear of a photon? A photon is a corpuscle of radiant energy. It might be called a new type of atom. Dean Lewis, of the chemistry department of the University of California, is developing the theory that radiant energy does not travel in waves, but that light and heat are carried by corpuscles which shoot out from the body which has held them.

Always we are on the verge of great discoveries. Nothing is too big or too new to get into a mind which is properly open. Perhaps day-after-tomorrow's children will know as much about photons as the American people today know about baseball. What a world that will be then?

If G. Wells, in one of his later books, calls communism the "sabotage of civilization by the disappointed." There is nothing like actual experiment to prove the value or the worthlessness of a theory or a practice. At first communism, given trial in Russia, was an interesting experiment. The world is a better, sounder place today because communism was given a trial. Now we know that it is not a good form of government. By experiment a lot of even interesting theorizing is made unnecessary.

TRAINING SCHOOL TO BE HELD HERE YEARLY

Baptist Officials Decide To Hold Leadership Training
Classes Annually

Owing to the splendid success of the Marion Baptist Leadership Training School which closed at Trinity Baptist Church last night, it has been decided by officials of the Baptist Churches here to make the school an annual affair. More than 120 students were enrolled this year, attendance having increased with each session since the school opened Sunday.

Classes, arranged for the training of leaders in church work, were on the following subjects, "The Pulpit in the Church School," "Teaching in the Church School," "Young People's Organization and Methods," and "Junior Materials and Methods."

Award for commendable work during the week were made last night.

TO PREACH HERE

Rev. C. H. Stull, Granville, Ohio, will conduct revival campaign at Trinity Baptist Church, starting Wednesday night.

CHURCHES PLANNING REVIVAL SERVICES

One Congregation Already Conducting Fall Evangelistic Campaign

With the approach of the winter months and beginning of strenuous activities in local churches, three Marion Churches are planning, and one is already engaged in revival campaigns.

The annual fall revival will open Sunday at First Church of Brethren with the pastor, Rev. W. R. Shively, in charge. The campaign will open at the morning service when Reverend Shively will preach on "Borderland Christians." Sunday night his theme will be "Old Wine in New Bottles."

Services are to be held at 7:30 o'clock each night except Monday.
Mrs. Ellis Snyder will be in charge of the music.

Rev. C. H. Stull of Granville, director of evangelism in Ohio Baptist Churches, will conduct the campaign to open Wednesday night and continue over two Sundays, at Trinity Church.
The three local Baptist churches, Fife Memorial and Emmanuel as well as Trinity, will join in the services.

Wide Reputation
Reverend Stull has held his present office for six years with excellent success. He is known as one of the great preachers of the Baptist denomination and for his ability as an organizer and director of such campaigns. He is a promoter of visitation evangelism, which is to be in order here. Rev.
Wiley S. Young, pastor of Fife Church, will direct the chorus choir, made up of singers from all three churches.

There will be services each night at 7:30 o'clock, excepting Saturday, services to close Sunday, Nov. 13. The public is cordially invited to attend.
Arrangements are being made at Calvary Evangelical Church for a three-week revival to open there Monday Nov. 7, with Rev. E. Radebaugh, pastor, in charge of the preaching, and James Campbell, former member of the Pettitford Evangelical party, now making his home here in charge of the music. Services will be held each night at 7 o'clock with the exception of Saturday.

Revival services are already in progress at Oakland Evangelical Church.
Bread is plentiful enough and cheap enough, but a lot of it is not good enough.

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. J. L. HOUGHTALING
Pastor, St. Paul's Lutheran Church

WHAT is your favorite hymn? Whether you are actively connected with a Christian church you are familiar with some of the great hymns of the church. Who is there who has never heard "Nearer My God to Thee," or "Lead Kindly Light"? These hymns, and others, have led

Sally's Shoulders

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN" and "MONEY" and "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL"

Read This Story
SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the daughter of her father, who has not lived with her mother for years. The family consists of MRS. JEROME, the twins, BEAU and MILLIE, and Sally. Mrs. Jerome enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for MR. PEEVEY afterwards.

In the flat below the Jeromes lives TED SLOAN, who wants Sally to marry him. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, whose office is across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Millie is Nye's secretary, and he is blindly infatuated with her, although Millie prefers a salesman named DAVIDSON, and wants to get him a job with Nye. Davidson is secretly in love with Sally, who will have none of him.

Beau gets some money from Ted Sloan by means of bad checks. Sally borrows the money to pay Ted from Mr. Peevey, and turns it over to Beau. But Beau uses it to clothe his girl, MABEL. After their marriage Mabel keeps her job, but she and Beau buy a car and a fur coat, and finally have to come back home to live, where they pay no heed. Sally is frantic because Millie seldom gives any money towards the support of the home. Millie goes to the hospital for an operation. While she is there John Nye pays her bills, and in return for his kindness, Sally does a half day's work for him daily. Mr. Jerome comes home while Millie is ill, but goes away again, disgusted with the sloppy way in which his

SUFFERED AFTER EVERY MEAL DUE TO INDIGESTION

Stomach Misery and Kidney Troubles Banished by the New Konjola, Says Marysville Man

The surprising medical compound, Konjola, which The Konjola Man is explaining to crowds of people daily at the Stump Pharmacy, 121 South Main St., Marion, has not only become the sensation of this city, but is also the talk of cities and towns throughout this entire section. For instance, just a few days ago, Mr. A. D. Sherman, for 27 years a contractor of Marion, now living at Route 1, Marysville, Ohio, made the following statement about the remarkable recovery Konjola gave him:

"I had a severe case of stomach trouble about 13 years," said Mr. Sherman. "After every meal I was subject to indigestion and all kinds of miseries. My food would ferment and sour. This brought on spells of gas and bloating which made me short of breath and dizzy pains around my heart. I had dizzy spells and feelings like I would faint. The condition of my kidneys was just as bad as my stomach. I got up very often at night, which broke up my rest, and always felt weak and sore across the region of my kidneys."

"I had been hearing of Konjola and what this medicine was doing in Marion. I gave it a trial and I want to tell you that I am feeling like I never had stomach or kidney trouble in my life. The indigestion pains are gone, appetite is increased and I never have gas bloating or heartburn like I suffered before. My kidneys are in the best condition they have been in years. Pains never center in my back any more and I don't have dizzy spells. The night rising is ended and there is a great difference in the way I feel each morning. Konjola has certainly changed my whole condition and made me feel years younger, so I gladly give it my endorsement."

The Konjola Man is at the Stump and Sams Pharmacy 121 South Main Street, Marion, where he is daily assisting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given—Adv.

PLUMBING REPAIRS AND NEW CONSTRUCTION

Get your home ready for the cold weather.

She got off the car and walked along until she found a drug store. From its dark, ill-smelling telephone booth she called John Nye's house. Her heart sank when a man servant's polite voice informed her that Mr. Nye was gone out.

The voice went on: "I think you will find him at his office, if you will call there."

"Thank you, I will," breathed Sally, her voice full of relief.

By some miracle a taxicab had drawn up beside the curb before the drug store while its uniformed driver bought himself a package of cigarettes within. In two minutes Sally was speeding down town.

"If only he hasn't left," she said tensely to herself, as she left the elevator at the top floor.

He had not. The minute she rounded the corner of the hall she saw him. He was standing outside his office door, talking to Mr. Peevey, of all people! Mr. Peevey hardly ever worked on Sunday.

They turned to look at her in surprise as she came up to them. She nodded at them and slipped into Mr. Peevey's office to wait until they finished talking.

Five minutes slipped away.

"I may as well phone the house while I'm waiting, and see if Beau's still there," thought Sally, as the steady hum of their voices came to her through the closed door. Her desperate fear was that Beau would become panicky and do that fatal thing—"skip town."

But he answered the telephone, and she breathed a sigh of thankfulness at the sound of his voice.

"This is going to come out all right, Beau," she told him quietly, strong in that feeling of faith and peace that had come to her on the street car. "I'm sure of it." She was.

Beau granted. "Did Aunt Em give you the money?"

"No," said Sally. "But I'm downtown now, and I'm going to ask Millie's Mr. Nye for it."

"You're crazy," Beau's short reply. "He'll never give it to you—and he'll know this story about what I've done all the rest of his life. To tell it around to everybody."

"He's not like that!" Sally broke in. "And anyway, I'm not going to tell him that I want the money for you, Beau, just trust me this once! I know what I'm doing. And promise me that you won't run away until I get home."

"I'll give you an hour," Beau's voice answered her after a long pause. "If you're not here then, I'm gone, see?" And with that he hung up.

Sally set down the desk telephone and looked up.

Mr. Peevey had come in silently, and he was standing facing her. She saw that he had heard everything she had said to Beau.

"Sit down," he said sharply. "Now, then, tell me what's wrong."

But Sally would not tell him. "I've got to see Mr. Nye," she said, doggedly. "He's going to lend me some money."

Mr. Peevey shored his glasses up on his forehead and squinted at her. "Have you asked him for it?" Sally shook her head.

"Well, before you do it, I want to talk to you," Mr. Peevey said, and he sat down in his own chair behind his old-fashioned desk.

"You've worked for me a long time," he began. "And you've done a lot of things for me that I've never paid you for—a lot of extra work at night and so on. And now that I'm closing my business, I'd like to give you a little present. How much money is it that you need?"

Sally shook her head stubbornly. "No, I won't take money from you," she said decidedly. "I owe you almost a hundred dollars now." She got up, and so did he.

"Listen to me a minute," he said. "I'm an old man, and I've never bought myself much pleasure with my money. I would enjoy giving you what you need right now. That is, if it isn't too much." He was always cautious. "But if it's a matter of a few hundred, I could do it, and it would give me a great deal of enjoyment."

"It's a thousand," said Sally, with a gulp.

"Well, a thousand," he agreed, and she wondered if she were dreaming or not.

As she stood there, thinking how she had always misjudged him, there came to her the sound of John Nye's office door opening and closing. The sound of his feet going down the corridor.

"All right," she answered slowly. "If you'll lend it to me I'll take it—but I'll pay it all back."

He gave his bitter and wintry smile. Two months later, when he died of cancer in Bethlehem hospital, Sally knew what that smile meant.

She understood, then, why he had been so willing to lend her first a hundred dollars and then a thousand. He probably had known then that he was doomed—and earthly riches do not seem important when people reach the place where earthly riches can no longer be put in the bank, or gloated over, or even loaned.

But on that Sunday morning Sally went home, filled with wonder and awe, because of the miracle that had just occurred in Mr. Peevey's office—the miracle that had sent her up to his office that morning, in search of John Nye.

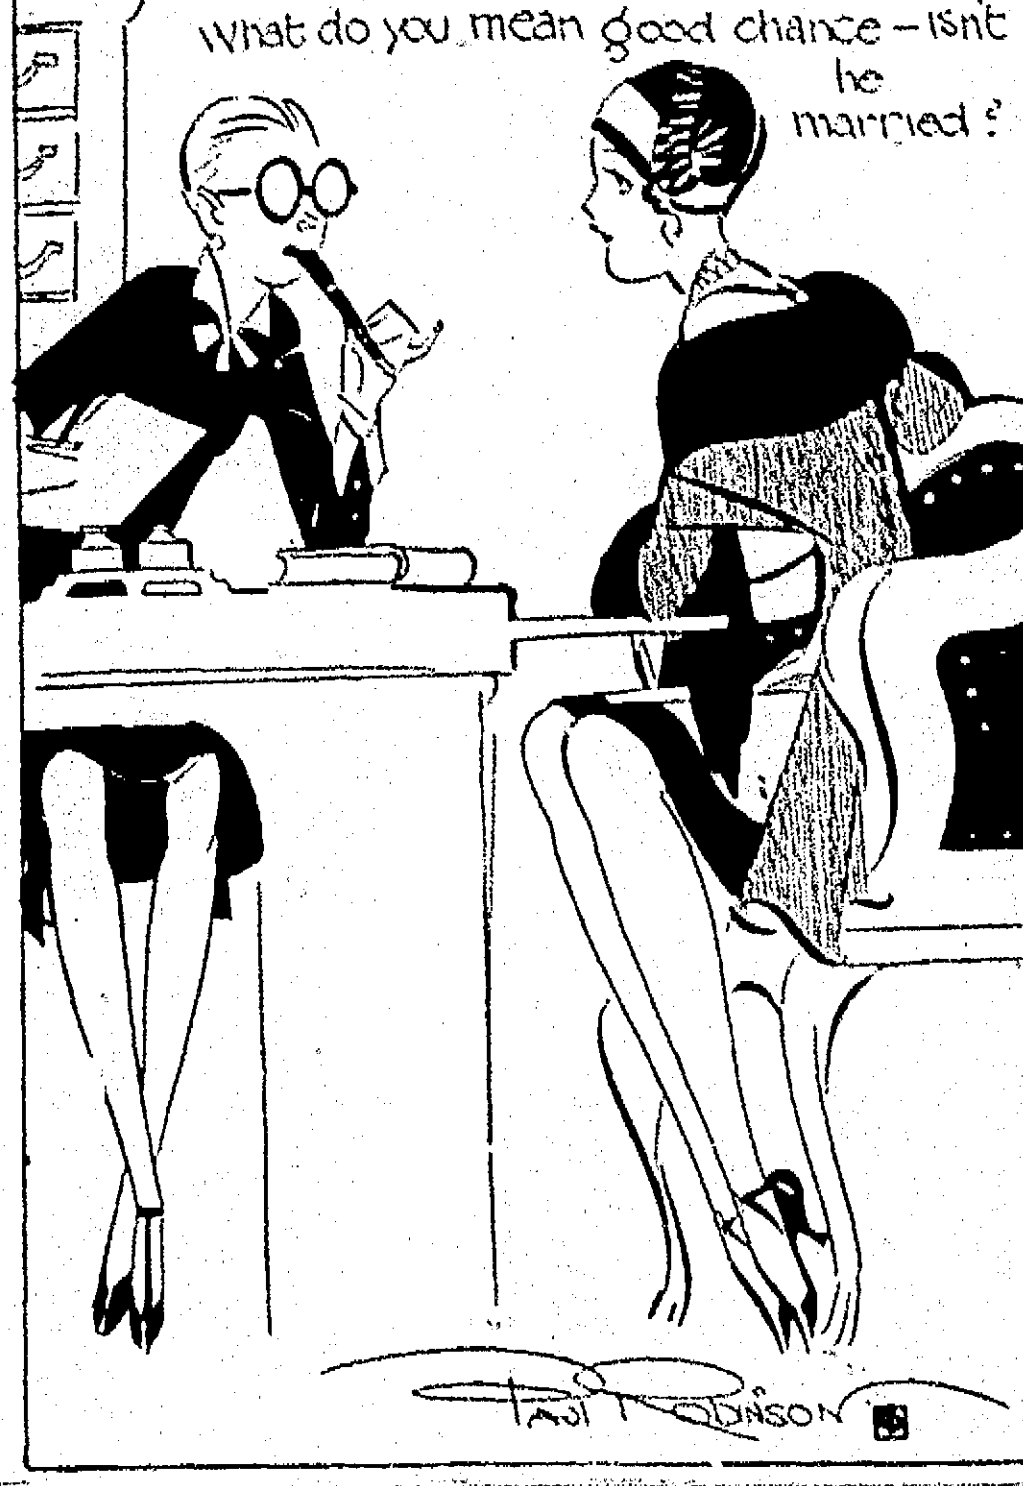

On Monday Beauregard Jerome returned the money he had stolen just as quietly as he had taken it away—and nobody but Sally and Mr. Peevey were the wiser.

"Thank heaven it's all over, and I didn't have to tell John Nye the story," thought Sally.

On Saturday Aunt Emily telephoned and asked Sally to bring Ted Sloan out.

"Show-off!" she called him teasingly, and suddenly she began to shake her shoulders in true Gilda Gray style. "Didn't you ever hear of a Shimmy Black Bottom?"

"Hey, cut it out," growled Ted, as a man in a fur corner of the dining room began to snay his fingers and grin at her with great appreciation. "Everybody's looking at you."

Aunt Emily appeared in the doorway with a smoking platter of chicken. She stopped dead still, frowned and shook her head warningly.

The man in the corner put two fingers in his mouth and whistled. "Keep 'er up!" he called cheerfully. "Keep 'er up!"

But Sally, horrified, stopped and rushed out into the kitchen.

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

Today was Saturday and I woke up before it was daylight, and I got up when I woke up, and asked my father: at breakfast after I had let Jubilee down and everything I could take Frank-horse and go after walnuts and butternuts with an old wagon. Ited could get. He said I might and that I might rake up all the dead leaves and rubbish in the yard and take it in the wagon and take it out and dump it somewhere, that is the way a boy always gets a good time. He has to work so hard for it that it is not any use to him after he gets it. But the bunch couldn't go nutting till I got my horse so they all got busy and helped.

The Lost Bag of Tripe said he would take the horse up and hitch him on the wagon and bring it back while we got the rubbish ready, so he put the harness on him and went away and we got the yard all cleaned up and were wondering if he wouldn't ever come when here comes him and Goop, and oGoop said he caught him going past his house with the horse and wagon and knowed the crook was up to something, and he clumb in over the end and grabbed him, and he said he was only going for a ride, and I told him he could go for a walk because he wasn't going with us.

We got all the rubbish in and every one setting on top of it and him running along hanging onto the end and begging to go along, but we told him no, and then we stopped even looking at him till all at once someone yelled and began to jump out of the wagon, and I looked back and it was all on fire, and by the time I could get the fire hose and get the horse out it was pure burning, and a crowd began to get around, and someone must of passed for the fire department, and

Highlights of Fall-Sinclair Oil Conspiracy Trial Listed

HEARING RESTS OVER WEEK-END

Federal Counsel Near End in Presentation of Evidence

Washington, Oct. 29.—The Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial was restored over the week-end today with the prosecution's case nearly completed.

The highlights of the week in the government's effort to prove that former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, New York oil magnate, fraudulently negotiated a lease on the Teapot Dome Naval Oil reserve in consideration of which Fall received $250,000, were summed up by those following the case as follows:

- 1.—The refusal of M. T. Everhart, son-in-law of Fall, to testify where he got $250,000 in Liberty Bonds he deposited to Fall's credit, on the ground that the "might tend to incriminate" him.
- 2.—Definite establishment, through serial numbers, that these bonds had come from the Continental Trading Co. of Canada.
- 3.—That Sinclair was actively interested in, and guaranteed in writing, the oil deal for which the Continental company was created, which embraced the purchase of 22,323,333 barrels of oil from the late Col. A. E. Humphreys of Texas, at $1.50 a barrel and the immediate resale of the oil to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Co. at $1.75.
- 4.—That all of the profits of the deal thus made, $3,000,000, were converted into Liberty Bonds and that those ultimately reaching Fall were included in the lot.

5.—Testimony of half a dozen oil operators that they unsuccessfully sought information from Fall about the possibility of leasing Teapot Dome, their efforts ranging from a month before Sinclair got the lease to three days after it actually had been signed.

Cite Press Release

6.—The appearance of two members of congress who had sought information about the possibility of leasing Teapot Dome at the very time Fall and Sinclair were concluding the lease, and their testimony they had been given a press release Fall had issued the day before the lease was signed to the effect no definite policy had been concluded concerning Teapot Dome.

7.—The testimony of former Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt, who had charge of the navy's fuel oil storage program, that he had known nothing of the lease until after it was signed, although the terms of the contract called for the carrying out of the storage program.

8.—Evidence that Fall had never submitted the lease to the solicitor of his own department, or the attorney general despite the fact that a Standard Oil attorney had expressed doubt as to the legality of a lease which called for exchange of crude oil for fuel oil.

9.—That Fall never advised Teapot Dome for lease, nor called for competitive bids as is usually done.

10.—The appearance of an attorney for H. M. Blackmer, oil man, prominently identified with the Continental deal, with a statement that Blackmer would refuse to answer the government's subpoena on the ground he was in Paris when served and out of the court's jurisdiction, thus depriving the government of a key witness.

Uren J. Roberts, federal counsel, now has only to complete the presentation of the Continental deal and bring in evidence concerning a final $25,000 Sinclair gave Fall after the latter was out of office. He will then rest and the defense will begin.

Some people often do odd things to get even.

ENTERS GUILTY PLEA TO LIQUOR CHARGE

Eli Smith Fined $250 and Costs on Illegal Possession Charge

A space of two minutes saved Eli Smith his automobile in municipal court yesterday when a charge of transporting liquor, was dismissed by Judge William R. Martin when it developed at the hearing that although the can of alleged liquor had been placed in the car, the wheels had not moved, and therefore he was not guilty of transporting.

He pleaded guilty, however, to a charge of illegal possession and was fined $250 and costs, which had not been paid yet at noon today.

Smith was arrested by Patrolman Howard Andrews on the Kenton-pk Thursday morning after the patrolman had watched Smith take a five-gallon can of corn whiskey from beneath a clump of bushes and lifting it to his back, carried it to a car standing in the road. Smith had just deposited the can in the machine when he was placed under arrest by Andrews.

Howard Stevens, who was with Smith when arrested, is being held at police headquarters, no charge having yet been placed against him.

Washington*Curtis Takes Sudden Leap to Front as Presidential Candidate

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press-Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Nobody possibly could have imagined, as late as a month ago, that Senator Charles Curtis would be mentioned seriously as a presidential possibility.

Almost a year ago, in looking down a list of Republican eligibles, would have included Curtis' name—but only as a theoretical possibility. He's a party leader in the upper house of congress—a very prominent one. He's considered, on every thing, he'd have been included, as an "honorary" possibility, but he certainly wouldn't have been considered an "active" one—until so much talk of a "western man" started.

Today—well, without going so far as to say he's a pronounced possibility even yet, he's jumped a good many grades upward on the possibility roll.

The idea is, if this "western man" really is as formidable as some folk think it is, maybe Curtis could be fixed up as an compromise candidate, and a regular party split avoided.

He's a "hard-in-the-wool" "organization" politician. For "regularity" he can't be beaten. Heck of the "old guard," first, last and forever. He's a conservative. "Safe and sane" would be his middle name, if he had any. A radical streak in Curtis' make-up is unthinkable.

Yet he's a westerner—Kansas is "out west"—there's no getting away from it.

CURTIS also has done a thing or two that even the western insurgents had to loo on with a certain amount of favor.

The "old guard," he it remembered, never was strong for President Coolidge, but simply made the best of him because it couldn't help it. He stuck in "that New England crowd," which the "old guard" always resented—and put the skids under, too, as often as possible, as witness the fact that Coolidge's buddy, William M. Butler, invariably was found "holding the sack" whenever the president tried to do anything for him.

In a quiet way, a number of these old "wheel horses" have spiked a good many Coolidge policies in the last three years, and Curtis has done his fair share of it, which, of course, was highly gratifying to the "anti-everything" element.

AGAIN, in 1925, Curtis and a few other oddtimers, going out to their home states to be reflected, handled their campaigns in a way to amount to open repudiation of almost everything Coolidgeistic.

Curtis, for instance, declared for the McNary-Haugen brand of farm relief, in defiance of the president and the "down states" generally.

All this went a long distance toward taking the curse off his ultra-conservatism, as the political incorrects regard him. They still feel that he's pretty backward—and yet, perhaps, an individual who can be negotiated with.

At any rate, when the western "radicals" began to throw a scare into the conservatives' rank, and one of the latter suggested—

"You fellows know, of course, that we couldn't stand for Norris any more than you'd agree to J. P. Morgan, but how about Curtis?"—the "radicals" attitude was—

"Him—um—well—it's worth thinking about."

He was quite a strong vice president, but nobody pays any attention to that campaign.

'INTERFERENCE' MELO THAT IS WELL BRED

English Importation Well Done;
Eva Le Gallienne Revives
Herself

BY BUSHNELL DIMOND
New York, Oct. 29.—"Interference," at the Empire, is a melodrama that, by some miracle, manages to be continuously well told; frequently exciting and, now and then, profoundly moving. Just why gentility in this form of writing so often closes in on the medium with a supercilious snap, is not known. But "Interference," imported from London, escapes the blight. If, at its best, it seems to be just a shade better than it is, the "fault" lies at the door of the casting and the direction. I have never seen a set of assorted actors so perfectly fitted into a framework that, in the process, became a real, though little, living world.

"Interference" is not remarkable in its writing. The skillful and literate Roland Pertwee, British novelist, and a collaborator haven't tried to do anything more ambitious than touch up that old one about the wife with the Unoch Arden husband; the battered love letters, and the discarded sweetie with the red hair and the brandy breath. In this they have succeeded admirably. But in two scenes, the encounter between the men and the reunion of the vagrant lovers, the innate humanness of the situations has forced their hand, and they play trumps, red hot from the deck. As done by A. E. Matthews, Arthur Wontner and Kathlene MacDonnell, these scenes, brilliant and bitter and quickened with a harsh tenderness, make your visit to the Empire almost obligatory. "Interference" has, too, about the nearest murder you ever saw.

Eva Revives Herself
Eva Le Gallienne, in reviving the Dutch tragedy, "The Good Hope," done here in 1900 by Ellen Terry, has, surprisingly, revived herself. No one, I hope, could outdo my admiration for this actress' achievement in running a large repertory smoothly and well; but the actress has often been submerged in the process. I know nothing more superior than Miss LaGallienne when she puts on a merino wrapper and looks into the fire, uttering symbolic wise cracks; in "The Good Hope" she was wisely handed over the part of the old woman whose sons perish at sea to Alma Kruger (a superb portrait, granite and fire), and contented herself with the role of the young mother-to-be whose lover drowns.

There must be something about peasant clothes that kindles and liberates Miss LaGallienne, for not since "Lilium" has she given such an arresting, beautiful and sympathetic performance. There is also touching and tragic acting by Donald Cameron, Charles McCarthy and Josephine Hutchinson; but the play, for all its solid merit, clean edge and astonishing modernity, is damaged by its last act, in which the incoherence of Egon Brecher and overdrawn characterization combine unpleasantly. "The Good Hope," however, is by no means to be missed. See it, if only for its sensitive lighting and decoration, through which the ironic howl of the ocean reverberates.

This Is Too Bad
The latest mystery melodrama to come to town is "Out of the Night," in which it hadn't. How anyone, the actors included, can get much fun out of deserted houses, moose heads with electric eyes, secret panels, and corpses hidden in bay windows makes a mystery all its own. I imagine that Diantha Pattison gets considerable enjoyment out of her job, since all she has to do is to come on at ten twenty; fling a few rough remarks at her old man; kill him and suffocate herself which, if Miss Pattison is good at quick changes, should enable her to be eating a club sandwich at Sardi's by quarter to eleven.

If my references to the plot of "Out of the Night" cause your curiosity to sparkle, you will have to investigate its humors for yourself; for I am of a clement nature and refuse to strike any cripple. "Out of the Night" is especially spared on the score that it isn't so much a cripple as a deformed body that never was notably alive.

FUND CONTRACTS TO EXPIRE JAN. 1, 1938

Plans Under Way To Receive Bids from Banks on Three-
Year Terms

Three-year contracts held by banks of Marion County as depositories of county funds will expire on Jan. 1 and arrangements are now being made by the board of commissioners to receive bids for the three-year period following that date.

According to plans now under way, bids will be received and new contracts negotiated early in December.

The county's funds are now distributed among 10 banks, including the six banks in the city of Marion and four in the villages. The four village depositories are the Moral Banking Co. at Moral, LaBlue Bank at LaBlue, Peoples Bank at Green Camp and the Prospect Citizens Bank at Prospect.

Last year the county's revenue from interest on deposits totalled $22,970.69, which is near the annual average, records show.

Deposits are divided into two classes, active and inactive, the active accounts being used for payment of current bills of the county.

The banks are now paying two and a quarter per cent of active deposits and interest rates on the inactive accounts range from 3.50 to 4.00 per cent.

The county now has approximately $420,000 on deposit in the various banks.

Rallies Feeble, Specialties Drop

REPORTS NOT STIMULATING

Promised increase in Steel and Auto Buying Doesn't Materialize

MARKETS AT A GLANCE
New York, Oct. 28.—Railroad stocks, reactionary; industrial stocks, reactionary; domestic bonds, inactive; foreign bonds, steady; grain, fairly steady; cotton, firm; copper, firm; rail, steady; rubber, steady; sugar, steady; pig iron, steady; and foreign exchange, steady.

New York, Oct. 28.—The week-end business and financial reports were not such as to stimulate very much speculative buying of either the industrial or the railroad stocks, and prices moved through a narrow margin at the beginning of trading today. Feeble rallies took place in the first hour in a few of the market favorites, including General Motors and U. S. Steel, but numerous specialties, oils, coppers and other industrials declined to a lower range of prices.

The promised increase in steel and automobile buying showed little evidence of having materialized, and fresh weakness appeared in the steel shares in the second hour. Professional selling of U. S. Steel common made itself felt as soon as it became known that there were few if any supporting orders for the stock around 131, the opening price. The stock backed to below 130, whereas independent steel stocks like Crucible and Youngstown held at fractional gains.

Little to Support Theory

Thruout Wall Street held the general impression that pessimistic reports had been somewhat overdrawn, there was very little to support that theory in the buying demand for stocks. Bearish traders in and out of the financial district continued to hammer at the speculative favorites, forcing prices in many cases to the lowest levels since the peaks were reached in early September.

The pool stocks in which distribution is now being carried out suffered heavy shrinkage, and high priced specialties in the insurance stocks moved downward sensationally. Russia Insurance, which touched a peak price of 101 yesterday, dropped back to 155 for a 20-point decline, signaling the end of expensive short covering.

The mercantile stocks were not so easily pried from their moorings, but selling pressure was sufficient to ward off the semblance of a rally in this period. The bears were in the saddle, with a determination to ride their advantage to the limit. An advance in retail gasoline prices in some sections of the country, with declining crude oil production made a good support for the oil stocks, and prices in that section of the market were comparatively steady.

MARION HAS HIT ITS STRIDE

Public Confidence Returns With a Smash! HERE ARE THE FACTS

The pessimist who has worried about business conditions in Marion is going out of fashion today. For a brief moment he held the stage and folks listened carefully to his dire predictions. But all that is past, and now he has no audience. Confidence has taken hold of Marion, a broad optimism has taken root here, and a new activity is spreading itself through the community. Marion has hit its stride!

Obviously the pessimist had no place in Marion. The evidence was all against him. He was fighting against unsurmountable odds. He was licked to a frazzle before he started. Bank deposits have grown, folks have prospered. Temporary depressions, or seasonable sicknesses, mean nothing to business substantially built and financed. There is nothing permanent about a headache—it disappears as quickly as it comes. Marion has hit its stride!

This organization during the past few weeks has made a careful canvass of business conditions in Marion. Our representatives have talked with scores of business men—with bankers, merchants, attorneys, manufacturers—and laymen. We have found this:

MARION TODAY IS PLANNING AS IT NEVER HAS PLANNED IN ITS HISTORY FOR BIGGER, BETTER BUSINESS. CONDITIONS SEEM IDEAL—PUBLIC CONFIDENCE HAS DEVELOPED RAPIDLY—INDUSTRIAL EXPANSIONS ARE IN THE MAKING—FINANCIAL CONDITIONS INDICATE AN AMPLE SUPPLY OF MONEY FOR ALL REQUIREMENTS—BUILDING OPERATIONS CONTINUE BRISK— and the only fly in the ointment in the past few months, it would seem, has been a "mental depression" causing a hesitancy on the part of some to ACT. That mental depression has definitely disappeared. Smiles have replaced frowns.

One-Half Million Dollars of Outside Capital for a New Theatre!

How is business in Marion? What does outside capital think of this city? Both questions are aggressively answered through announcement of a new $500,000 theatre to be built on W. Center Street—financed by men whose judgment in selecting prosperous, growing cities is well known. These men, after a careful survey, selected Marion for their next theatre—and if there has ever been any doubt in your mind concerning the future development of Marion, that doubt should now be dissipated. When a half million dollar theatre is erected by outside capital, you have ample evidence of city strength. MARION HAS HIT ITS STRIDE— with a vengeance! R. T. LEWIS.

Cities do not thrive on pessimism. It takes CONCENTRATED OPTIMISM—with a real kick in it. It takes POSITIVE force, not negative. Marion today is developing POSITIVE FORCE—because Public Confidence has been restored. And the result is that BUSINESS IS HEADED INTO HIGH SPEED.

When you think about Marion and its future, think about these FACTS:

- The diversity of its industries;
- How substantially they are financed;
- The ever broadening market for their products;
- The ability and training of their executives;
- The financial strength of Marion's banking institutions and the willingness with which they cooperate with local business;
- The city's railroad facilities and its accessibility to all important commercial centers;

The prosperity of the individual citizen;

The availability of land for industrial, business and home use;
The confidence of outside capital in investing in Marion;

The constant cooperation of all important local civic bodies in creating a Bigger Marion.

Marion has hit its stride!

A new confidence reigns; optimism has returned. Those who hesitate now will be lost in the shuffle. To recognize the present changing conditions is to move with them—not against them!

As a citizen of Marion YOU are faced today with new opportunities for self-advancement. Your confidence, your courage and your effort are required. Rich dividends are yours for the taking—and by your own action you determine your gain or loss. Growth, broader fields of activity, personal happiness—these things are at stake.

Tomorrow, try the simple psychology of saying: "MARION HAS HIT ITS STRIDE!" Get the full significance of that statement. Say it to yourself and to your neighbor. Practice it as you go about your city. Put it to work for YOURSELF! Remembering all the time that MARION HAS HIT ITS STRIDE and that FACTS support you.

Nationally as well as locally, business leaders have created a new picture for the following twelve months, and CONFIDENCE IN BUSINESS was never so justifiable as now.
